ABSTRACT

This supplement to the "Bibliography of the History of Libraries in New York State" contains primary and secondary sources, in English or translated, completed or published from 1968 to 1972. Documents are concerned with functions and activities of individual New York State libraries and/or systems, and library development on a statewide basis. Topics excluded are education for librarianship, library legislation, and history of library organizations. Types of materials include journal articles; monographs; monograph sections; conference proceedings; pamphlets; federal state and local documents; reports; papers; and theses and dissertations of graduate library programs. If only one citation about a particular library or if only one reference to a library that has ceased operations exists, any type of material is included. Arrangement of the first part is by subject--general references, public libraries, school libraries, academic libraries, special libraries, and counties, regions, and systems. Part two follows the format and arrangement of the American Library Directory with libraries listed alphabetically by city/town. Entries are in various forms depending on cataloging codes and agencies. (KP)

FOREWORD

The New York State Library is proud to publish this supplement to the Bibliography of the History of Libraries in New York State prepared by Manuel Lopez. The Library profession is indebted to the School of Library Science of Florida State University for publishing the original bibliography which has proved of substantial value to students of library science, historians, librarians, bibliographers and others pursuing an interest or research in any aspect of librarianship in New York State. The work is comprehensive, well-organized and current through 1972. Those concerned with the development of every type of library in New York State as well as with the social, cultural and educational impact libraries have on society will be well served by this publication.

Introduction

The scope of this bibliography includes primary and secondary sources, published and unpublished, in English or translation, that were completed or published from 1968 and up to and including 1972, concerned with library functions and activities of individual libraries and/or library systems in New York State. Materials concerned with similar aspects of library development on a state-wide basis are also listed. Education for librarianship, library legislation and the history of library organizations (i.e., state agencies, library commissions, local, state and honorary library associations) have been excluded.

Journal articles, parts of monographs, monographs, proceedings of conferences, pamphlets, and documents (federal, state and local) are included. Reports and papers required for the Master's degree in Library Science are listed as well as theses and dissertations. The bibliography does not include references to the following categories and types of publications: newspaper articles, biographical information, book catalogs, book lists, descriptive bibliographies, guides to the library, annual reports, statistics, library promotional publications, and references about exhibitions.

Exceptions to the above policy of exclusion are the following cases: (1) when the reference is the only one about a particular library; (2) when the citation is the only one referring to a library that has ceased operation.

The types of materials and categories excluded from the bibliography only partially delimit it to the status of a contribution. There is a wealth of primary source material, both printed and in manuscript form, that could be included, as well as library archival sources; i.e., lists of trustees, floor plans, illustrations, accession books, charters, publications, etc. Unfortunately, however, libraries and librarians, with few exceptions, have not systematically collected and organized such materials. Hopefully, bibliographies such as this one, because of their inadequacies, may generate sufficient pride and interest in library history to develop the necessary human and financial resources to successfully resolve this professional and bibliographic problem.

The arrangement of the bibliography is in two major sections: Part I: References, of a general nature, are listed under the following categories: General (reference), Colonial Libraries, Public Libraries, School Libraries, University and College Libraries, Special Libraries and Counties, Regions and Systems. Part II: This section parallels the format and arrangement of the American Library Directory. The libraries are listed alphabetically by city and town.

Reference about a library that has been absorbed by or merged with another institution is listed under the name of the currently operating library.

The five-year period spanned by this supplement is particularly rich in commemorative histories of cities, counties and town. Every effort was made to identify and obtain these publications for the purpose of citing all references to facets of library history.

Modification of cataloging codes, reorganization of agencies and practices of original cataloging in various libraries has resulted in a variety of entries. With the belief that it would be more of a disservice than an aid, no attempt has been made to impose an arbitrary consistency on the various forms of the main entries. Another problem area is that of papers and reports submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements of a Master's degree in Library Science. In some instances it was not possible to distinguish between such student efforts and theses. Such references have been simply identified by the designation "Master thesis" after the title.
